

Deep Down in My Heart: A Ode to Why I Need Her

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could talk to friends
But deep down in my heart, I know that I could talk to them, but I couldn't share my sadness as I did with her.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could travel alone.
But deep down in my heart, I know that I could travel alone, but I will not have anyone to share my views as I shared with her

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could have lunch with colleagues

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could have lunch with my teammates, but I couldn't share my experience and views as I did with her

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could go to pubs and dance with strangers

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could dance with strangers, but I couldn't find the person who could match me as she did

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could listen to conversations online

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could listen to the conversations online, but I couldn't find the conversations as interesting as hers

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could cook with my siblings.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could cook with my siblings, but I couldn't get the comfort and guidance as she used to give me.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could get the encouragement from role models.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could get encouragement from role models, but I couldn't get the support and belief as she used to give me.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could click the pictures with anyone.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could click the pictures with anyone, but I couldn't find anyone who could bring the smile as she did.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could play games with anyone.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could play with anyone, but I couldn't find the one who gave adrenaline rush as she did.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could cuddle my friends.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could cuddle my friend, but I couldn't feel the warmth as I did with her.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could walk alone and feel the nature.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could walk down enjoying the nature, but I couldn't feel the nature without the sound of her steps beside me.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could flirt with pretty girls.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could flirt with pretty ones, but I couldn't find anyone as pretty as her.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I need to convince her when she pouts.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I need to fondle her, but I couldn't say that it is the most loved moment.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could drink with my buddies.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could have drink with my buddies, but I couldn't find the person who creates the drama as she does.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could weep on my pillow.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could weep under my pillow, but it couldn't provide the caring and relief as her laps did.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could kiss the cute ones.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could kiss the cute ones, but I couldn't feel the taste of heaven as her lips used to give.

My friends used to ask me why I needed a girlfriend when I could have sex with a prostitute.

But deep down in my heart, I know that I could have sex with prostitute, but I couldn't feel the heartbeat as I felt hers.